A Women's Worth by Gay Cudillo

□ In a brief conversation, a man asked a woman he was pursuing the question.....

"What kind of man are you looking for?"

She sat quietly for a moment before looking him in the eye and asking.

"Do you really want to know?"

Reluctantly, he said, "Yes."

She began to expound... As a woman in this day and age, I am in a position to ask a man what he can do for me that I can't do for myself. I pay my own bills. I take care of my household without the help of any man. I am in the position to ask, "What can you bring to the table?"

The man looked at her. Clearly he thought that she was referring to money.

She quickly corrected his thought and stated, "I am not referring to money. I need something more." I need a man who is striving for perfection in every aspect of life." He sat back in his chair, folded his arms, and asked her to explain.

She said, " I am looking for someone who is striving for perfection mentally because I need conversation and mental stimulation. I don't need a simple-minded man." I am looking for someone who is striving for perfection spiritually because I don't need to be unequally yoked... believers mixed with unbelievers is a recipe for disaster. I need a man who is striving for perfection financially because I don't need a financial burden. I am looking for someone who is sensitive enough to understand what I go through as a woman, but strong enough to keep me grounded. I am looking for someone who I can respect. In order to be submissive, I must respect him. I cannot be submissive to a man who isn't taking care of his business. I have no problem being submissive...he just has to be worthy. God made woman to be a helpmate for man. I can't help a man if he can't help himself . When she finished her spill, she looked at him. He sat there with a puzzled look on his face.

He said, "You're asking a lot."

She replied, " I'm worth a lot."

1st day on the job! weee

i guess it can never be too quiet than on this office. 😊

"the feeling of loneliness is in deep, buried within my skin. they say once at work, i forget the happiness education has taught me."

The first day at work seemed more than an ordinary day for me. the only problem bugging me when i left my house was what were the PUJs to ride and where can i find those jeepneys. i don't really know what street this office is at. all i know is that its near some fast food branch along the busy streets and a uniquely intersected overpass.

I can't imagine that i had endured waking up EARLY morning, coz I'm not used to those things anymore. so i prepared myself. waiting for the time to kick it, i launched from home like a rocket freshly gased up. as i encountered my officemates i began to wonder what would it be like to hang out with them in this office. my assumptions were somewhat right. these guyz are friendly but not friendly enough being the first time they knew who I am, what am I doing in there office.

Since that morning, they realized that I was utterly quiet. hehe nevermentioning a word before they would speak to me. i know i have this poorly developed social mingling, but I'm really not fond at it though. I'm just being me to them, simple yet shy, intelligent yet stupid. haha =]

We'll anyways. My boss, at once, gave me my first porject. to design and develop a logo that would be of use to a company in a land far away form here-America. I do not know where specifically, all i know is that this customer was from that country and he wants us to make a logo for there business-whatever.

Since I'm kinda busy right now, you'll just have to wait for another one of my write-ups. thanks!

degree?! hardwork?! passion?! everything

Sometimes you sort of take a look at your life and it boggles your mind. here's what i got: a degree can never be an assurance that i can land a decent job. its how well i use my knowledge, skills and most importantly how well i know myself. its never easy to have that first interview, the first exam and all the first. as an individual i understand that challenges, fear and tension will always be part of me. those emotions gives me a positive energy to get going and to dream on. i have been doubtful lately but the experiences i had for the past months made me realize that im so much blessed and i need to pursue more of me. get out of my comfort zone, relate more with people, time to stop and "smell the roses" as they say, reinvent my soul, renew my passion, going deeper to my self as i say. i need that once in a while to be back on track. though i didnt lose myself in the process now but i feel im on a niche or a dead-end. this reinventing thing will help me though.

It's when God brings you through the desert... you come out, and you wonder, what is next? Well now I look around, and I see the challenge is all around me. In the simple complacence of life. I see my life in a whirlwind of keeping up relationships, serving, planning, good times, and overall not enough sleep! In the midst of that, there's also joy to be found in the mundane moments, or moments like this when I have some time to just chill and think.

belle's notes... =]

staring at this blank papers..

im soo glad i have ample of time to write my thoughts.
it feels awhile since my last write-ups. im having a great time in here.
writing my thoughts, stories, piece of wisdom and etc..

to start with, this morning i had a conversation with an aunt.
our conversation is centered on somebody who commit suicide.
its maybe safe to write bout it here since i didnt divulge identities. to continue, that somebody who commit suicide is 28 yo, single and only daughter. so in our culture it is expected that she would take care of her parents but in this case, that would not happen since she killed herself and left her loved ones behind. she wrote a suicide note which stated her reason for suicide. the reason is that she had lots of debts which she cant handle. Prior to her suicide, she attended a meeting on his workplace the agenda was that not all employees will be absorb to be regular employees maybe her dilemma is that she wont have a job in the future.

the moral behind her story, is never ever give up. life is full of challenges, frustrations, flaws, uncertainties and rejections. in return there are abundant solutions available.
im pretty sure their is a God who will succor me in times of needs. plus i have matt, aunt alma, aunt olive, aunt reda, faye, my sister hane and jograce and the list continues.
on the brighter side of life, its full of happiness, beautiful days, awesome people, profound moments, heaps of opportunities, crazy experiences, and etc...

tracking back the past, one of my friends told me that im more than blessed:

family, love, security, education, happiness etc.. i have everything in life save the financial aspect.i totally agree with it.

in life, i really dont need that huge house, elusive cars, stressful job and that expensive lifestyle. a laugh a day, a conversation with family and friends, a hug, a pat on a back, eating tempura on an ordinary day, a walk with a loved one, a visit in an orphanage, special school or home for the dying (knowing that i still have something to give), a freetime to learn japanese, a nursing book which my parent could afford, my aunt letting me borrow her book, reading paulo coelho books and other favorites, crazy momentss(we have lots of it) with my mom, dad, joseph, jograce, hane and joyce, reciting rosary at dawn, attending mass with my family and relatives, going to fiestas and celebrations... and the list goes on and on it doesnt mean i stop here though i still have to join the dog eat dog world however, i sorta know my priorities and real treasures.
